

In a superb central location, accessible to the exclusive shopping districts of Bond Street, Knightsbridge and Sloane Street, the beautiful building and garden have a warm and quirky ambience. The handsome red brick and sandstone house that is 2 Audley Square was designed by TH Wyatt and built for Lord Arthur Russell in 1876, the Club finally found its permanent home in 1921, when the members bought the freehold of 2 Audley Square from the Russell family.

Today its aim remains to provide a welcoming environment and some of 'the best talk and pleasantest evenings' for graduate, professional and business women of all ages. The function space is now available for corporate events and private dining making the Club an exclusive option to the corporate market of which you do not need to be a member, or female!
